The 6:15

WEDNESDAY · NOVEMBER 11, 2026 NO. 40

THE BOARD

CALENDAR — NEXT 10 DAYS

Thu 11/12	Cisco reports Q1 FY2027 after close, 4:30p ET — confirmed via the company's own investor notice. Applied Materials also reports Thu. 11/12 after close (date not independently reconfirmed this run) [flag]; AMAT guided Q4 EPS $3.82–$4.22 on $9.75B–$10.75B revenue vs. a Street consensus nearer $3.65–$4.00/$10.3B [flag, single-sourced]. Treasury sells $25B in 30-year bonds, 1p ET [NEW].
Fri 11/13	October PPI, 8:30a ET (BLS).
Tue 11/17	David Bednar's $23.15M Yankees qualifying-offer deadline. Also Nvidia's Q3 FY2027 earnings call [NEW].

No FOMC in this window — next meeting Dec. 8–9, rate decision Wed. 12/9 2p ET with a new dot plot (Federal Reserve, confirmed). OPEC+'s Nov. 29 meeting falls outside the window and is characterized two ways: a full ministerial setting 2027 policy (most Western coverage) vs. the JMMC's routine 69th session (TASS, Arab News) [flag, divergent]. No rocket launch, frontier-AI release, or VC round cleared this brief's bar this run.

METRICS

Equities (Tue. close)	S&P 500 7,520.93 (−0.38%); Dow 52,231.89 (−157.86 pts, −0.30%); Nasdaq Comp. 25,065.87 (−0.74%) — CNBC, giving back part of Monday's rally on a hot CPI print
Oil (Mon. settle)	ICE Brent $92.57 (−$5.75, −5.85%); NYMEX WTI $86.85 (−$3.98, −4.38%); spread ~$5.72. Tue.'s settle not confirmed this run — accounts put intraday lows below $90 (Brent)/$85 (WTI) before a partial recovery [flag]
Oil (Wed. pre-mkt)	Brent ~$92.20 (+0.78%), WTI ~$86.53 (+0.57%), reported rebounding on renewed Hormuz-attack claims — single paywalled source [flag, single-sourced]

Rates (Tue.)	2Y 4.73% (+17bp); 10Y 4.98% (+10bp, intraday high 5.004%); 30Y 5.35% (+9bp) — Treasury.gov par curve; bond market open despite Veterans Day
VIX	Not confirmed for Tue./Wed. this run; last confirmed close 28.18 on Nov. 5 (+69.7%, third-biggest one-day jump since 1990) [flag]
Gold	$4,138.25 (+1.74%), Mon. close, Dec. futures — no Tue./Wed. level confirmed [flag]
DXY	102.11 (+0.51%), Mon. close — no Tue./Wed. level confirmed [flag]
Asia	Not confirmed for Tue./Wed.; last confirmed Nikkei close Mon. 58,775 (+2.33%), rebounding off Fri.'s 5.78% rout — its worst week since Mar. 2020 [flag]
Europe	Not confirmed this run [flag]
Retail gas (AAA)	$4.0203/gal nat'l avg. (11/8), down from $4.0688 (last issue)

Equities and rates per CNBC and Treasury.gov primary data. Several Tue./Wed. closes (oil settle, VIX, gold, DXY, Asia, Europe) could not be independently confirmed this run and are marked rather than estimated.

HORMUZ COUNTERS — DAY 255 OF CLOSURE; LAST CONFIRMED NOV. 1–9 PLUS NEW ITEMS BELOW

Diplomacy	A named Qatari official publicly disputed the Nov. 9-reported truce terms as inaccurate Mon. 11/9 — first on-record pushback, vs. previously anonymous sourcing [NEW]. Separate single-sourced reporting claims renewed Hormuz tanker attacks since Nov. 9 are undercutting the talks [flag, unconfirmed against a primary wire]
Transits	1 vessel, Nov. 1 (IMF PortWatch) vs. 85/day baseline — now 10 days stale
Dark tankers	86/160 screened, 53.8%, as of Nov. 4 (straits.live) — now 7 days stale
Flows	Kpler: ~13.1M b/d vs. 17.1M b/d pre-war (~77%) — unchanged, still single-sourced via CNN
War-risk premium	~32.0x pre-crisis, Oct. 7 — 35 days stale, background only

Attacks (separate cadence)	UKMTO confirmed an advisory for 19:20 UTC Nov. 7, putting Nov.'s vessel-attack count at 8 in Hormuz/the Gulf; Oct. saw at least 34, the war's highest monthly count (Joint Maritime Information Center, threat level held "Severe"). Hellenic Shipping News separately counts 102 total transits (~62% AIS-dark) cumulative since the naval blockade began July 14 — a different cadence than straits.live's screen, not comparable IRGC claims (Iranian state media), UKMTO advisories, IMF PortWatch's transit count, Kpler's flow estimate and straits.live's dark-tanker screen measure different things on different cadences and are never averaged or differenced here.

TRANSACTIONS

Yankees	Bednar's qualifying-offer decision due Tue. 11/17, not yet made. Chisholm not tendered one, unchanged.
Knicks	6-4, beat Milwaukee 117-85 Mon. night at MSG (Brunson 23, Towns 21/16) [NEW]; play at Cleveland tonight, not yet played.
Northwestern	6-3 — corrects "3-7" carried in issues No. 38–39, a transposition error [NEW, correction] — after a 24-10 home loss to Iowa; next Sat. 11/14 at Ohio State.

LEAD

CPI · RATES · NVIDIA/COREWEAVE

A hot October CPI pushes the 10-year toward 5% and claws back Monday's rally — while CoreWeave's blowout quarter undercuts the AI-capex panic that Nvidia's slide keeps retelling

Tuesday's data did what Monday's oil-driven optimism couldn't: it gave the market a reason to doubt itself. October CPI rose 0.4% month-over-month, a tenth above the 0.3% Dow Jones consensus, with core CPI up 0.3% for a third consecutive month — also a tenth hot versus the 0.2% estimate. [fact, BLS/CNBC] There is no year-over-year figure this cycle: last year's government shutdown stopped BLS from collecting October 2025 prices, so there is no comparable base to measure against. Shelter rose 0.3% and accounted for more than 30% of the headline gain; gasoline added 1.0%, food 0.5%, transportation services 0.8%, medical commodities 0.5% and electricity 0.9%, while used cars fell 1.2%. [fact] None of this captures Monday's oil plunge — that shows up, if it holds, in November's report — which means the one input that most clearly argues for disinflation from here wasn't in Tuesday's number at all.

Rates read the print as exactly what it was: a second straight month of 0.3% core inflation that puts a floor under how much the Fed can ease, not evidence of reacceleration. The 10-year Treasury spiked intraday to 5.004% before settling at 4.98%, up 10 basis points on the day; the more Fed-sensitive 2-year jumped 17 basis points to 4.73%; the 30-year rose 9 to 5.35% — all per Treasury's own par curve, with the bond market open despite the Veterans Day holiday. [fact] The December 9 FOMC meeting, which looked like an afterthought a week ago, is suddenly live again: Dallas Fed President Lorie Logan said this week she wants "at least two more" 25-basis-point hikes, and Governor Christopher Waller had already flagged a 50-basis-point move as something the Fed should consider if core inflation kept printing near 0.3% — which it just did, for the third month running. [fact] Equities gave back a slice of Monday's rally rather than panicking: the S&P 500 closed down 0.38% at 7,520.93, the Dow fell 0.30% (-157.86 points) to 52,231.89, and the Nasdaq Composite lost 0.74% to 25,065.87 — a measured retracement against a session that had just posted its best gain since April. [fact] The read: the market is treating Tuesday's print as a reason to trim rate-cut hopes, not as a reason to re-price the soft-landing case Monday's oil news had reinforced. [read]

Nvidia's slide extended into a second session, falling more than 5% Tuesday — one account put the intraday drop near 7%, briefly pulling the company's market cap below $4 trillion — with the rate-repricing compounding, not replacing, the overhang from Monday's disclosure that its board has opened an independent investigation into CEO Jensen Huang's relationship with a woman US intelligence reportedly assesses as having ties to Chinese intelligence. [fact; flag: exact closing print not independently cross-verified against a second named source this run] No new reporting on that investigation surfaced since Monday, and Congress's own deadline for Huang to accept — or propose an alternative to — a November 18 hearing date falls today, with no response found yet. [flag, unresolved] CoreWeave supplied the session's one unambiguous strength: reporting after Tuesday's close, it posted revenue of $3.66 billion, up 168% year-over-year and above the roughly $3.55 billion Street consensus, raised full-year revenue guidance to $13.0–13.3 billion from a prior $12.4–13.2 billion, and said its contracted backlog grew to $132.5 billion from $104 billion in June — even as its net loss widened to $709 million on interest expense that nearly tripled to $846 million. [fact; see Business] That combination — demand and backlog both re-accelerating even as financing costs bite — is the most direct rebuttal yet to the AI-capex-payback fear that drove November 5's sell-off, and it arrived on a day when the macro story was working against risk assets, not for them.

Watch: whether Friday's PPI, and especially November's CPI — the first report that will actually capture Monday's oil crash — keep today's hot-inflation framing alive into the December 9 FOMC; whether Huang responds to Congress's hearing ultimatum; whether chip and AI-infrastructure stocks can decouple from Nvidia's slide on CoreWeave's numbers; and whether the Qatar-brokered Hormuz truce survives the week, given a named Qatari official's on-record pushback and unconfirmed claims of fresh tanker attacks since Sunday.

POLITICS

Kansas's governor's race remains uncalled, but the margin and posture have both shifted since issue No. 39. Democrat Cindy Holscher's lead over Republican Ty Masterson has widened to roughly 7,600 votes, up from the 5,500–6,000 reported Nov. 6, as all 105 counties conduct the state's mandated hand-count audit of an additional 10% of precincts — automatic under Kansas law once a race falls inside a 1% margin. [fact, DEVELOPING] A person close to Masterson now says he does not plan to pursue a further recount or formal dispute if the audit confirms Holscher's win — a softer posture than the active-recount framing carried in the last two issues. [NEW, flag single-sourced] No certification date beyond the already-known Jan. 11, 2027 inauguration was found this run.

ECONOMICS

Beyond the Lead: Friday brings October PPI at 8:30 a.m. ET, the second of this cycle's compressed back-to-back prints — a side effect of the shutdown-delayed data calendar pushing October's releases into November. [fact] The EIA's weekly petroleum-status report, usually a Wednesday fixture, shifts to Thursday 11/12 this week because of the Veterans Day federal holiday, a scheduling wrinkle oil traders will be watching given how much this week's price action already turns on physical-flow questions out of the Gulf. [fact] The December 8–9 FOMC meeting — confirmed directly against the Federal Reserve's own calendar, with a new Summary of Economic Projections due alongside the rate decision — is now the first meeting since September where a hike, not just a hold, is genuinely part of the conversation, per Logan's and Waller's comments cited in the Lead. CME-style Fed-hike-odds trackers were cited around 91% for a December move in at least one aggregator post-print, up from roughly 77–80% pre-CPI, but that single-sourced figure wasn't independently verified against a named futures-derived tool this run and should be read as directional, not precise. [flag, single-sourced]

BUSINESS

CoreWeave's numbers, detailed in the Lead, closed out its regular Tuesday session at $48.73 before the report; its after-hours move was reported inconsistently across outlets, from roughly 2% to 8%, depending on source and timing of the quote. [flag, sources disagree] For scale against the backlog figures in the Lead: CoreWeave's own August guidance had called for full-year 2026 revenue of $12.4–13.2 billion, a range Tuesday's raised $13.0–13.3 billion guide now sits above even at the low end — a real re-acceleration, not just a beat against a soft bar. Cisco reports Q1 fiscal 2027 Thursday after close, 4:30 p.m. ET, confirmed via the company's own investor notice; last quarter it beat consensus ($1.22 vs. $1.17 adjusted EPS) but still fell more than 5% the next day on elevated expectations — the bar Thursday's print needs to clear again. [fact] Applied Materials also reports Thursday (date not independently reconfirmed this run); [flag] one source puts the stock down 23.5% since its last report, underscoring how closely Wall Street is now watching the chip-equipment capex read that drove part of November 5's AI selloff.

Beyond the Lead: Nvidia's next scheduled event is its Q3 fiscal 2027 earnings call Tuesday, Nov. 17 [NEW] — six days out, and now more consequential given the unresolved board investigation and today's Congressional hearing-response deadline. Separately, Anthropic's IPO timeline remains unset: one WSJ-cited report floats pricing "as early as the week of Nov. 16," while a separate analytical estimate — not a company announcement — puts it closer to Nov. 18–19 or a slip past Thanksgiving to the week of Nov. 23; both are projections, not confirmed dates. [flag, two non-authoritative estimates, not reconciled] A valuation figure in the $1.5–2 trillion range is circulating but unconfirmed, and neither of the two conflicting H1 financial figures flagged in issue No. 39 — $16.3 billion revenue against an $80 billion-plus loss, versus a $2.7 billion profit claim — was resolved against the S-1 itself this run.

GEOPOLITICS

The Qatari pushback detailed on the Board marks the first on-record governmental denial of the Nov. 9-reported truce terms, replacing what had been anonymous diplomatic sourcing — a meaningful shift in sourcing quality even though it doesn't resolve what Doha and Tehran actually discussed. [fact] Separately, OPEC+'s Nov. 29 meeting — just past this brief's 10-day calendar window — is being characterized two different ways by outlets covering it: most Western coverage frames it as a full ministerial meeting that will set 2027 production policy, calling it "the much more important test" for the group, while TASS and Arab News describe it as the Joint Ministerial Monitoring Committee's routine 69th session. [flag, sources diverge on what kind of meeting this is] The distinction matters for how much market-moving news to expect in ten days, and this brief will track which framing holds as the date approaches.

IRAN & HORMUZ

Beyond the Board: UKMTO's own advisory record confirms an incident at 19:20 UTC on Nov. 7, which the Joint Maritime Information Center says brings November's tally of vessels attacked in the Strait of Hormuz and the wider Gulf to eight — building on an October count of at least 34, the war's highest monthly total, with Hormuz's threat level still held at "Severe." [fact, UKMTO/JMIC] A separate, single-sourced account claims attacks have continued past Nov. 9 specifically in a way that is "countering" the truce talk and feeding Wednesday's oil rebound — plausible given the UKMTO pattern, but not independently confirmed against a primary wire this run. [flag] None of this has moved the Board's lagging trackers:

PortWatch's transit count and straits.live's dark-tanker screen are both unchanged and now 7–10 days stale, and Kpler's flow estimate is unchanged week-over-week — all three still describing a pre-Nov. 9 state of the world. A differently-constructed count from Hellenic Shipping News — 102 total tanker transits, about 62% running AIS-dark, cumulative since the naval blockade took effect July 14 — uses a different baseline and cadence than straits.live's point-in-time screen and should not be read against it.

SPORTS

Yankees	Season over. Bednar's qualifying-offer decision due Tue. 11/17, not yet made; Chisholm not tendered one.
Knicks	6-4, beat Milwaukee 117-85 Mon. night at MSG (Brunson 23, Towns 21/16); at Cleveland tonight, not yet played.
Northwestern	6-3 — corrects "3-7" in issues No. 38–39, a transposition error — after a 24-10 home loss to Iowa; next Sat. 11/14 at Ohio State, noon ET (FOX).

Continuity. Corrected this issue: Northwestern's cumulative record, carried as "3-7" in issues No. 38 and No. 39 — a transposition error; the actual record is 6-3, confirmed independently against ESPN and the team's own athletics site. Resolved: the Knicks' Monday game (117-85 win over Milwaukee, now 6-4). Watch for next issue: Thursday's Cisco/AMAT earnings; Friday's PPI; whether Tuesday's reported Hormuz attacks are confirmed by a primary wire; Huang's response to Congress's hearing deadline; Anthropic's pricing timeline; Kansas's audit outcome.

Unverified figures are marked in red: Tuesday's oil settle and Wednesday's pre-market levels (single-sourced); Tuesday/Wednesday's VIX, gold and DXY closes; Tuesday/Wednesday's Asia and Europe closes; the Nov. 9-reported Hormuz deal terms and the claimed renewed attacks since; December's Fed-hike-odds figure (91%, single aggregator); Anthropic's IPO pricing date and H1 financials; AMAT's Thursday report date/consensus (not reconfirmed this run). Nothing was estimated or filled from memory.
