THE BOARD

CALENDAR · WEEKEND FORMAT

Today	Northwestern (6-2) hosts Iowa (6-2) at Ryan Field — kickoff listed as 6:30p ET by Northwestern's own schedule (Fox), 7:30p ET by some previews [flag, unreconciled].
Next 10 days	Mon 11/9 Veterans Day observed (markets open, bond market closed). Tue 11/10 October CPI, 8:30a ET. Fri 11/13 October PPI, 8:30a ET. No FOMC in this window — Fed holds 3.50%–3.75%, next decision Dec. 9. OPEC+ held output flat for a third straight month at its Nov. 1 meeting; next meeting Nov. 29.

No frontier AI release, rocket launch, or large VC round cleared this brief's verification bar in the last 24–48h. Governor-race calls flagged unconfirmed in issue No. 36 (Kansas, Ohio) remain unconfirmed this run [flag, continuity].

METRICS · FRIDAY CLOSE, WEEKEND FORMAT

Equities	S&P 500 7,376.86 (+0.31%); Nasdaq Comp. 24,579.42 (+1.09%); Dow 51,285.73 (−0.46%) — a partial rebound from Thursday's rout (Nasdaq −5.52%, S&P −4.36%, Dow −3.44%), the worst session since April 2025's tariff shock. VIX 25.64 (−9.01%), down from Thursday's intraday 28.09 peak (highest since Mar. 31).
Oil / rates / other	Brent $98.32 (+0.03%) / WTI $90.83 (+0.34%), Friday settle (Yahoo; straits.live's own last-settle figure matches the Brent print) — spread ~$7.50. 10Y 4.859% (Yahoo, Fri. afternoon); 2Y/30Y not independently confirmed this run. DXY 102.28 (−0.02%); gold $4,074.90 (−0.94%). Retail gas (AAA) $4.1732/gal, most recent confirmed read (11/1) [stale, 6 days]. Asia/Europe not re-confirmed this run with markets shut through the weekend [flag].

HORMUZ COUNTERS — STRAITS.LIVE, 07 NOV 10:12Z

Status	Closed to commercial shipping since Feb. 28 — Day 251
Transits	Still 2/day (Oct. 25, IMF PortWatch) vs. 85/day baseline — 13 days stale
Dark tankers (24h)	72/157 screened, 45.9% — well below the 7-day avg. of 80.6% [flag, see Iran & Hormuz]
War-risk premium	~32.0x pre-crisis — estimate 31 days stale (set Oct. 7)
Indices	Crisis Pressure 88±7 (Extreme, flat, now only 2 of 4 inputs); Escalation Forecast 55±11 (Elevated, −3 vs. Wed.)

Transit count (IMF PortWatch, AIS-confirmed crossings), dark-tanker screen (AIS-silence proxy) and war-risk premium (insurance-market estimate) measure different things on different cadences — straits.live's "closed" verdict is its own composite, not an average of the three.

TRANSACTIONS

Yankees	Extended David Bednar a $23.15M qualifying offer Nov. 2 (confirmed); he has until Nov. 17 to accept, decline, or negotiate a multi-year deal [DEVELOPING]
Knicks	Beat Chicago 135-105 Wed. night (Brunson 33); 4-4 by this brief's count [flag, not checked against a published standings page]
Northwestern	6-2 (3-2 Big Ten) after a 34-26 loss at Oregon Oct. 31 — corrects this brief's prior 3-6 count; hosts Iowa today

LEAD

AI CAPEX REPRICING · LABOR DATA

A $2 trillion-plus AI-driven rout wipes out the post-election rally, then partly reverses on a jobs report that blew past every forecast

Wednesday's relief rally didn't survive its first full trading day. Thursday, Nov. 5, delivered the worst US equity session since April 2025's tariff shock: the Nasdaq Composite fell 5.52% into correction territory, the S&P 500 dropped roughly 4.4%, and the Dow lost 3.44%, or about 1,833 points. Per CNBC's reporting, the trigger wasn't the AI-regulation risk this brief flagged after the Democratic sweep in issue No. 36 — it was a narrower, more mechanical worry that AI data-center buildout itself could slow coming out of the midterm result. Information technology was the S&P's worst-hit sector, down 7.30%, its steepest drop since March 16, 2020; the Technology Select Sector SPDR (XLK) fell 8.04%. The VIX jumped 11.57 points intraday to 28.09, its highest level since March 31 and its biggest one-day point gain since April 4, 2025. [fact, NEW]

The damage concentrated at the index's top. The Magnificent Seven lost more than $1 trillion in combined market cap in a single session; Nvidia alone shed over $440 billion, falling more than 9% and turning negative for 2026 (-2.6% YTD) for the first time this year. Breadth collapsed with it — NYSE decliners outnumbered advancers 2,344 to 416, and 174 S&P 500 names, 34.6% of the index, closed at least 20% below their 52-week highs. [fact, NEW]

Friday's October jobs report cut the other way. Nonfarm payrolls rose 165,000 against a consensus clustered near 59,000-65,000 — one of the largest beats of this cycle — and unemployment fell to 4.1% from 4.2%, also below forecast. August was revised up to 186,000 from 133,000 and September to 60,000 from 29,000, pointing to a labor market that cooled far less than the prior two prints had implied. [fact, NEW] Treasury yields rose on the data: the 10-year traded at 4.859% Friday afternoon, pushing back against the case for a near-term Fed cut; this brief could not independently confirm updated December-cut odds this run [flag]. Equities only partly recovered — Nasdaq +1.09% to 24,579.42, S&P +0.31% to 7,376.86, Dow still −0.46% to 51,285.73 — closing the week well below

Wednesday's post-election highs on every index. Nvidia itself rebounded 2.78% to $186.64. [fact, NEW]

Read: the two stories are mechanically distinct but landed on the same tape. Thursday was a repricing of AI-capex duration — the same mechanism this brief has tracked in hyperscaler capex guides, now hitting the chip complex directly rather than the cloud platforms — arriving the day after an election gave the market something calmer to rally on. Friday's beat is a separate signal that both complicates and partly offsets it: strong headline job growth is unambiguous good news, but it came with average unemployment duration at 27.1 weeks, the highest outside the pandemic era since 2016 — a sign, per CNBC's own framing, that the headline strength sits atop a more uneven labor market underneath. [fact/read, NEW] Watch: Monday's open, for confirmation the AI-capex repricing has run its course rather than paused; whether Nvidia's return to positive YTD performance holds; and Tuesday's October CPI, the next data point markets will read against a jobs number this strong.

IRAN & HORMUZ

Iran's war escalated again Friday night, on its own track from the market story above. Trump confirmed new US strikes on Qeshm Island — the same island the US hit Nov. 2, three days before the midterms — calling them "minor" and declining to give details beyond describing a strike that knocked out an anti-aircraft device in "five, maybe fifteen minutes." [fact, NEW] Iranian state media (Tasnim) reported two missile impacts on Qeshm with no official damage assessment; Iran's air defense separately claimed it downed a US MQ-9 drone over the island, and the IRGC said two tankers struck mines and caught fire in the strait — all single-sourced to Iranian state media and not independently corroborated this run [flag]. CENTCOM called the situation "relatively calm" hours later. Diplomatically, Iran's Bagheri Kani said Tehran wants "practical measures," not "paper commitments," before any new negotiating phase — a harder line than Trump's own claim of "a lot of progress" in talks. [fact, NEW] straits.live's dark-tanker screen fell sharply to 45.9% (72 of 157 screened) over the past 24 hours, well below its own 7-day average of 80.6%; this brief reads the one-day swing as more likely a coverage artifact than a real drop in evasive transits, consistent with the site's own floor-not-ceiling caveat on the metric, though it's flagged here rather than dismissed outright. [fact/flag, DEVELOPING]

SPORTS

Yankees	Bednar qualifying offer confirmed; decision due by Nov. 17.
Knicks	Beat Bulls 135-105 Wed.; Brunson 33. 4-4 by this brief's count.
Northwestern	6-2 after loss at Oregon; hosts Iowa (6-2) tonight.

Continuity. Politics, Business and Technology stay folded into the Lead and Board this weekend issue rather than carrying separate sections — Thursday's AI selloff and Friday's jobs report are the week's whole market and economic story, and nothing else broke. Two items flagged pending in issue No. 36 are now resolved without needing a separate Business section: Caterpillar's Q3 (actually reported Oct. 29, not this week as previously implied) showed revenue of $20.7B (+17% y/y) and adjusted EPS of $7.20; Qualcomm's fiscal Q4/FY26 (reported Nov. 4) showed revenue of $11.27B (+10% y/y) and EPS of $3.00, beating estimates, with a Q1 FY27 guide of $3.30-$3.50. Northwestern's record is corrected to 6-2 (3-2 Big Ten) from the 3-6 this brief carried in error previously. Watch for next issue: Monday's market open; updated Fed December-cut pricing; the Knicks' next game and a confirmed standings-page record; any Iranian military response to Friday's Qeshm strikes; and the still-unconfirmed Kansas/Ohio governor calls.

Unverified figures are marked in red: 2-year and 30-year Treasury yields; Asia/Europe levels over the weekend close; December Fed rate-cut odds; Northwestern-Iowa kickoff time (6:30p vs. 7:30p ET); the Knicks' record against a published standings page; Iran's tanker-mine and drone-downing claims; Kansas and Ohio governor-race calls. Nothing was estimated or filled from memory.
