The 6:15

FRIDAY · NOVEMBER 6, 2026 NO. 37

THE BOARD

CALENDAR — NEXT 10 DAYS

Fri 11/6 (today)	October jobs report (NFP), 8:30a ET — Dow Jones consensus +59K, FactSet median +65K (range +50K to +125K); unemployment rate seen holding 4.2%. Not yet released as of press time. Moderna reports premarket, per one preview — not independently verified this run [flag].
Sat 11/7	Northwestern at home vs. No. 21 Iowa, Ryan Field — kickoff time disputed across sources (sources show 3p, 6:30p and 7:30p ET) [flag].
Mon 11/9	Veterans Day observed — equities open, bond market closed.
Tue 11/10	October CPI, 8:30a ET.
Mon 11/17	Deadline for David Bednar to accept/decline Yankees' qualifying offer.
Fri 11/13	October PPI, 8:30a ET.
Sun 11/29	Next OPEC+ virtual meeting.
Fri 12/11	Federal funding deadline (H.R. 6500 continuing resolution) — shutdown risk if unresolved.
Wed 12/9	Next FOMC decision; Fed holds 3.50%–3.75% since Oct. 28.

No frontier AI model release, major rocket launch, or large VC funding round cleared this brief's verification bar in the last 24–48h.

METRICS — ~5:10A ET UNLESS NOTED

Equities, Thu. 11/5 close	S&P 500 7,353.73 (-4.36%); Nasdaq Composite 24,315.00 (-5.52%, closed in correction, >10% below the Oct. 6 record); Dow 51,523.06 (-1,833pts/-3.44%) — Yahoo Finance. Worst session for all three since April 2025. [NEW]
Futures, premarket Fri.	S&P 500 (ES) 7,401.50 (+0.25%); Nasdaq-100 (NQ) 27,104.00 (+1.32%) — Yahoo Finance, ~5:08a ET; a tentative bounce attempt. [NEW]

VIX	26.13 (-7.29%) as of ~5:02a ET (Yahoo) — easing off Thursday's spike; Thursday's close not independently confirmed this run [flag].
Brent / WTI / spread	Brent $97.46 (-0.84%); WTI $89.74 (-0.86%); spread ~$7.72 — both ~5:07a ET (Yahoo). Down roughly 5% from Tuesday's levels (issue No. 36), tracking the broader risk-off rather than a fresh Hormuz move. [NEW]
Treasuries	10Y 4.837% (Thu. close, Yahoo), down from Tue.'s ~4.952%; 5Y 4.608% (-8bp); 30Y 5.25% (-3bp) — a modest bond bid. 2Y not independently confirmed this run [flag].
DXY	102.02 (+0.46%) as of 5:08a ET (Yahoo) — dollar bid despite the equity rout, the opposite of Tuesday's election-driven selloff in the dollar.
Gold	$4,079.70 (-0.82%) as of 5:08a ET (Yahoo) — down alongside equities, not up; read below.
Asia, Fri. close	Nikkei 225 57,434.77 (-5.96%); Kospi 5,059.69 (-6.02%); Hang Seng 24,481.86 (-1.27%); Shanghai Composite 3,649.18 (-1.10%) — chip-heavy Japan/Korea following Wall Street's rout far harder than China. [NEW]
Europe	Not independently confirmed this run — no verified Fri. figures found for Stoxx 600, FTSE 100 or DAX [flag].
Retail gas (AAA natl. avg.)	$4.0688/gal (11/6), down from $4.1003 (11/5) and $4.2046 (10/30) — continuing decline. [DEVELOPING]

HORMUZ COUNTERS — STRAITS.LIVE, 06 NOV 10:12Z (5:12A ET)

Status	Closed to commercial shipping since Feb. 28 — Day 250 by this brief's count.
Transits	Still 2 vessels on Oct. 25 (IMF PortWatch) vs. 85/day baseline — unrevised, now 12 days stale.
Dark tankers, 24h	71 of 168 screened (42.3%), down sharply from the ~69% plateau of recent issues [DEVELOPING]; straits.live's 7-day reference is a count (77.1 tankers/day), not directly comparable to a single night's percentage — treat this as one noisy data point, not a confirmed trend break.

War-risk premium	~32.0x pre-crisis (+3,100%) — still the estimate set Oct. 7, now ~30 days stale, carried forward unchanged.
Indices	Crisis Pressure 88±8 (Extreme, flat 24h); Escalation Forecast 57±11 (Elevated, +4 over 24h — within the index's own error band, likely noise).

Methodology note: straits.live's "closed" verdict is its own composite judgment, not an average of the transit count, dark-tanker screen and war-risk estimate — those measure different things (AIS-confirmed crossings, AIS silence, and insurance-market pricing) on different update cadences and aren't additive.

TRANSACTIONS

Yankees	Confirmed: extended a one-year, $23.15M qualifying offer to closer David Bednar (Mon. 11/2); Bednar has until Nov. 17 to accept or decline. No qualifying offer extended to Jazz Chisholm Jr. [NEW, resolves prior flag]
Knicks	No confirmed result found this run for games since Monday's win over Brooklyn (3-4) [flag].
Northwestern	No game since the Oct. 31 loss at Oregon (3-6); next game Sat. 11/7 vs. Iowa, home.

LEAD

MARKETS

The AI trade breaks: Wall Street's worst day since April wipes out $2.5 trillion, and Asia hasn't stopped falling

Thursday was the reckoning this brief has been flagging risk for since AI-capex concentration became impossible to ignore. The S&P 500 fell 4.36% to 7,353.73, the Nasdaq Composite fell 5.52% to 24,315.00 and closed in technical correction — more than 10% below its October 6 record — and the Dow lost 1,833 points (3.44%) to 51,523.06. [fact, NEW] All three indexes posted their worst single session since April 2025. CNN put the market-value destruction at roughly $2.5 trillion across US equities; the "Magnificent Seven" alone shed more than $1 trillion. [fact, NEW] The damage was concentrated but not contained: all 11 S&P sectors closed lower, and the heaviest hits landed on the AI-infrastructure trade specifically — Nvidia closed down roughly 9.3% to $181.60 (sources range 8.3%–9.3%), erasing about $450 billion of its market value and pushing the stock negative for 2026; AMD fell sharply, with closing figures ranging 15.9%–17.3% across sources (StockTitan's official close: -17.26% to $404.40); Micron fell a reported 17.46% to $656.39; CoreWeave fell somewhere between 10% and 15% depending on the source; GE Vernova, a data-center power supplier, fell 9.1%; Tesla fell 10.8%. [fact/flag, NEW] This brief flags the source divergence on AMD/CoreWeave rather than picking one figure.

The mechanism matters more than the magnitude. Reporting converges on a single thread: investors used this week's Democratic sweep of Congress — and Democratic candidates in several states explicitly campaigning on pauses to data-center construction, Texas gubernatorial nominee Gina Hinojosa's call for a moratorium on new approvals being the most-cited example — to reprice the odds that the AI buildout keeps scaling at its current pace. [fact/read, NEW] That is a political catalyst landing on top of a valuation question that was already live: whether AI companies' capital spending is outrunning AI's actual earnings. Quilter strategist Stuart Clark's read, echoed across coverage, is the one worth sitting with for a portfolio built around mega-cap tech: concentration risk that built up over 2026's AI run means a handful of stocks moving hard enough can drag the entire index, independent of what the other 495 companies in the S&P are doing. [fact/read, NEW] President Trump posted on Truth Social blaming Democrats for the rout — a claim this brief notes without endorsing, since the proximate trigger (AI-capex and buildout-regulation fears) is distinct from broader macro conditions, which were little-changed week over week. [fact, NEW]

The cross-asset tape is the tell for how to read this. A genuine flight-to-safety selloff sends money into the dollar, into Treasuries, and into gold simultaneously. Thursday and Friday's pre-market got two of three: the dollar actually strengthened (DXY +0.46% to 102.02, reversing Tuesday's election-driven slide) and Treasuries caught a modest bid (10Y down to 4.837% from Tuesday's 4.952%, though only 5Y and 30Y moved meaningfully). Gold did not participate — it's down 0.82% to $4,079.70 alongside everything else. [fact, NEW] That combination — dollar up, gold down, equities down hard — reads less like classic risk-off hedging and more like indiscriminate de-risking: investors raising cash and covering dollar-funded leverage rather than rotating into traditional safe havens. [read] Oil fell in sympathy (Brent -0.84% to $97.46, WTI -0.86% to $89.74, both down roughly 5% from Tuesday) on growth-scare demand fears rather than any new Hormuz development — the Strait counters are essentially unchanged from issue No. 36. [fact/read, NEW]

Asia's Friday session shows this isn't over: Japan's Nikkei fell 5.96% and Korea's Kospi fell 6.02% — both heavily weighted to the same chip supply chain as Thursday's US casualties — while Hang Seng (-1.27%) and Shanghai (-1.10%) were comparatively insulated, consistent with lighter AI-capex exposure in Chinese index weights. [fact, NEW] US futures are attempting a bounce (S&P +0.25%, Nasdaq-100 +1.32% premarket), but that stabilization is fragile and untested against the session's own risk: October's jobs report lands at 8:30a ET, after this brief goes to press, with consensus clustered at a historically weak +59K to +65K. A number that confirms a cooling labor market would, in a normal week, be read as more room for the Fed to cut in December; in this week, it lands directly on top of a market already questioning whether the sector carrying most of 2026's gains can keep growing into its valuation. Watch whether Friday's cash session holds the futures bounce, or whether the AI-capex repricing has further to run.

POLITICS

Beyond the Lead: the mechanics of this week's House transition are now largely procedural rather than in doubt. Rep. Hakeem Jeffries is positioned to become the first Black speaker in the chamber's history when the new Congress convenes Jan. 3, 2027, pending that chamber's own organizing vote — a formality given Tuesday's confirmed Democratic sweep (issue No. 36), but not yet held. [fact, continuity] This brief could not independently confirm final gubernatorial outcomes in Kansas or Ohio this run — both were flagged as newly competitive late in the cycle in issue No. 35 and remain unconfirmed [flag, continuity]. Separately, the federal government's funding runway is now confirmed out to Dec. 11 under the continuing resolution Trump signed in early September, pushing the next shutdown-risk date past both the election and this week's selloff. [NEW]

ECONOMICS

Today's October jobs report (8:30a ET, after this brief's press time) is the week's remaining hard data point, with consensus split between Dow Jones' +59,000 and FactSet's median +65,000 (range +50,000 to +125,000) and the unemployment rate seen holding at 4.2%. [fact,

NEW] Wednesday's ADP National Employment Report showed October private payrolls up 86,000, topping the roughly 75,000 economists expected. [fact, NEW] Neither report drove Thursday's selloff — coverage is explicit that this was an equity-specific, AI-capex-driven move, not a macro-data reaction. [fact, NEW] No FOMC meeting intervenes before Dec. 9; CPI follows Nov. 10, PPI Nov. 13. Retail gas extended its decline to $4.0688/gal nationally, continuing a now months-long slide. [fact, DEVELOPING]

BUSINESS

Qualcomm's fiscal Q4/FY2026 results, filed via 8-K Wednesday after close, showed full-year GAAP revenue of $43.1 billion, GAAP EPS of $12.70 (boosted by a one-time $5.7 billion tax-valuation-allowance benefit, or $5.32/share) and non-GAAP EPS of $10.54; Q4 diluted GAAP EPS was $1.17, reversing a year-ago loss, while Q4 non-GAAP EPS of $2.17 was down from $3.00 a year earlier. [fact, NEW] The company guided non-handset revenue to grow more than 60% year-over-year, reiterated a $5 billion FY2027 data-center revenue target, and announced renewed long-term QTL licensing deals with Apple, Huawei and Transsion. [fact, NEW] Caterpillar's Q3 2026 results, filed Oct. 29 — earlier in the cycle than this brief's prior issue expected — showed sales of $20.7 billion (+17% y/y), diluted EPS of $7.13 ($7.20 adjusted) against $4.88/$4.95 a year earlier, a record order backlog of $78.1 billion, and full-year guidance held at mid-to-high-teens sales growth. [fact, NEW] Both prints predate and are unrelated to Thursday's selloff.

TECHNOLOGY

The Lead covers the mechanism; the magnitudes belong here. Micron's reported 17.46% single-day decline and AMD's reported decline in the 15.9%–17.3% range (sources disagree; this brief won't pick one) are both larger, in percentage terms, than Nvidia's roughly 9.3% drop — a reminder that the memory and GPU-adjacent names carry more balance-sheet and capex-cycle risk than the bellwether itself. [fact/flag, NEW] Nvidia's slide was still large enough in dollar terms (~$450 billion) to be the single biggest contributor to the Magnificent Seven's $1 trillion-plus loss, and pushed the stock negative for calendar 2026 — a notable reversal given it had been one of the market's largest contributors to gains through October. [fact, NEW] No frontier AI model release, funding round, or rocket launch cleared this brief's verification bar this run.

GEOPOLITICS

No standalone development beyond the Lead and Iran & Hormuz sections this issue — the market selloff is this week's dominant story outside the Strait itself.

IRAN & HORMUZ

This brief has no confirmed update on any Iranian military response to the Nov. 2–3 Qeshm Island strikes, nor on the Qatar/Pakistan-mediated framework, since issue No. 36's reporting [flag, continuity]. The one new data point is the dark-tanker screen's drop to 42.3% (71 of 168) over the last 24 hours, down sharply from the ~69% level this brief has reported as a plateau across several recent issues [DEVELOPING] — straits.live's own comparison figure is a daily count rather than a percentage, so this brief treats the move as unconfirmed as a trend rather than a reversal, pending a second reading. The transit count (2 vessels/Oct. 25 vs. 85/day baseline) and the war-risk premium (32.0x, set Oct. 7) are both now meaningfully stale — 12 and 30 days respectively — and are carried forward only because no fresher reading exists. [fact/flag, continuity]

SPORTS

Yankees	Season over. Extended a $23.15M qualifying offer to closer David Bednar (Nov. 2); he has until Nov. 17 to decide.
Knicks	3-4 as of last confirmed result (Mon. 11/2 win over Brooklyn); no confirmed score found this run for any game since.
Northwestern	3-6, idle since the Oct. 31 loss at Oregon; hosts No. 21 Iowa Sat. 11/7 at Ryan Field.

Continuity. Dropped from issue No. 36 as unchanged or superseded: the Nov. 3 election outcome itself (now background to Thursday's selloff); Tuesday's dollar-weakness/gold-rally framing (reversed by Thursday-Friday); the Brent/WTI same-hour source discrepancy (both benchmarks have since moved on the equity rout, making Tuesday's specific divergence moot). Qualcomm and Caterpillar, previously flagged as pending, have now reported and moved to Business.

Unverified figures flagged this issue: Thursday's VIX close; the 2-year Treasury yield; Friday's European index levels; Kansas and Ohio governor-race calls; any Knicks result since Nov. 2; Northwestern-Iowa kickoff time; exact AMD/CoreWeave percentage declines (sources disagree); Moderna's earnings timing today. Nothing was estimated or filled from memory — all are marked above rather than given a single invented figure.
